HCL Technologies awarded strategic Infrastructure Management Contract with Statoil HCL Technologies to Open Delivery Centre in Norway

London, UK, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland & Noida, India, February 13, 2012 HCL Technologies, a leading global IT services provider today announced that Statoil has selected it for strategic infrastructure management services. This deal win reinforces HCL's dominance in the Nordic region's IT services market where it is already the global partner of choice for several leading global corporations like Nokia, Danfoss and Electrolux in the region. The company will also open a delivery centre in Stavanger, Norway to service Statoil, in line with its model of Glocal Centers of Excellence.

HCL will deliver services across 36 countries handling the end to end monitoring and management of Statoil's entire IT infrastructure across all global locations including offshore production sites. The engagement includes managing Compute, Storage, Database and Telecom (network & security) environments alongwith desktop support.

"This engagement underscores HCL's leadership in global IT & Infrastructure management services for Global 100 Corporations. For large global enterprises, HCL is increasingly seen as a strategic IT partner with the ability to scale globally distributed IT operations in a non linear fashion while gaining flexibility and operational rigor." said Mr. Anant Gupta, President, Infrastructure Services & Senior Corp Vice President, HCL Technologies. "We are delighted to partner with Statoil and are committed to leveraging our global expertise, local understanding of business and mature integrated service delivery model to optimize Statoil's IT investments."

In the Energy & Utilities industry, HCL works with global 500 companies to optimize their upstream, midstream and downstream operations using innovative IT solutions. Europe has been one of the fastest growing regions for HCL Technologies with presence in 20 Plus countries and global business centers in Dublin, Ireland, Helsinki, Finland and Krakow, Poland serving over 50 customers.
